CAA earns 'Best Practice Award'

The Cincinnati-Hamilton County Community Action Agency (CAA) received a "Best Practice Award" for the successful implementation of its Cincinnati Manufacturing Certificates Program (CMC).

Given by the John Glenn School of Public Affairs at Ohio State University and the Ohio Association of Community Action Agencies, the award honors innovative and effective programs that meet the needs of clients and the community by assisting low-income families in becoming self-sufficient.

CAA is one of eight agencies to win the Best Practice Award this year.

Created for laid off or low-earning individuals, the CMC program equips production technicians with the high-tech skills and knowledge needed within the manufacturing industry.
